

Gender Studies: Exploring Identities and Transformations

Study Guide for Chapters 1–6 (no prior reading needed)

How to use this guide: Each chapter starts with the basic ideas, then moves to history or theory, then to Philippine (PH) examples, then to exam helpers. ★ marks must-know material. ⚠ marks pairs students often mix up. "In plain words" lines give the simple meaning of harder ideas.

CHAPTER 1: Introduction to Gender Studies

1.1 The basic ideas

Gender means the roles, behaviors, activities, and traits that a society, at a particular time, considers appropriate for men and women. ★

- Gender is socially constructed: people create it through society and culture, and they learn it through socialization (the process of being taught what is expected of you).
- It is contextual and time-bound, which means it differs from place to place and changes over time.
- Traditional thinking treats gender as a binary, meaning only two options (man or woman). The book argues that real gender is diverse and fluid and forms a spectrum. A person may identify at any point on the spectrum, or outside it.
- The binary can be harmful because it limits freedom, especially for transgender, intersex, and gender non-conforming people.
- The book says that natal sex (the sex a person is born with) is what makes up the two binary forms. Gender is broader than that.

Other key terms from the chapter ★

Term	Meaning
Feminist theory	An approach that tries to understand and fix the inequalities faced by women and other marginalized genders in a society.
Gender-based violence (GBV)	Violence committed against people because of their gender. It can be physical, sexual, emotional, or psychological. Most victims are women and girls, but men and boys can be victims too.
Intersectionality	An extension of feminist theory that studies how social identities such as race, class, ethnicity, sexuality, and disability overlap to create specific kinds of discrimination and privilege.
Queer	An umbrella word for sexual orientations, gender identities, and expressions that go beyond what is traditionally accepted (the heteronormative).

1.2 How gender studies developed (in order) ★

1. 19th–20th century feminist movements. Early feminists demanded women's rights, the right to vote, and equal pay. They also pointed out that history had made women's contributions invisible. This laid the foundation for scholarly study of women's lives.
2. Late 1960s to early 1970s, North America. Gender studies began as an outgrowth of the women's liberation movement, which pushed to change women's traditional roles. Scholars began to question biological determinism (the idea that biology alone decides gender roles) and studied how gender is socially constructed.
3. 1970s: Women's Studies. Formal university programs on women's history, literature, and social issues began. The first women's studies program was launched at San Diego State University in 1970.
4. Late 1980s to early 1990s: widening of the field. Scholars realized gender issues are not only women's issues because they also shape men's lives and identities. Gender studies became a standalone field covering both masculinity and femininity.
 - Men's Studies examines how society constructs male identity and masculinity.
 - Queer Studies (growing from LGBTQIA+ rights movements) challenges the binary view of gender and sexuality, and holds that race, class, and other identities also intersect with a fluid view of gender.
5. 1990s: doctoral programs in gender studies appeared, showing the field had gained academic legitimacy.

Gender studies is interdisciplinary, meaning it draws on many subjects (history, sociology, literature, law, and others).

1.3 Key thinkers ★

Thinker	What they contributed
Gayle Rubin (anthropologist)	Her 1975 essay " The Traffic in Women " introduced the sex/gender system , the idea that society turns biological differences into social roles.
Simone de Beauvoir	Her book " The Second Sex " (1949) criticized the oppression of women and laid the foundation for later feminist thought. The book credits the second wave of feminism with making gender studies possible.
Michel Foucault	A post-structuralist who showed how power constructs identity .
Judith Butler	Developed gender performativity : gender is not fixed at birth but is something people "perform" through repeated actions and behaviors.
R.W. Connell	Developed hegemonic masculinity to expose how power plays out in relations between genders. In plain words, it is the dominant, most-valued version of masculinity in a society.
Cory Aquino	The first female president of the Philippines. She is named as an inspiration for feminist practice in the country.

1.4 The five theoretical frameworks ★

A theoretical framework is a "lens" for explaining how gender works. The chapter presents five.

1. Feminist Theory fights for women's rights and against gender-based inequality. In the PH, unfinished work includes GBV, sexual discrimination, reproductive rights, and equality at work.
2. Intersectionality says identities like race, class, sexuality, and gender interact to produce unique experiences of oppression or privilege. In the PH, marginalized LGBTQIA+ people need intersectional advocacy. For example, transgender people can face discrimination for both their gender identity and their sexual orientation.
3. Postcolonial Feminism uses the history of colonialism to explain present-day gender relations in formerly colonized countries. In the PH, patriarchal structures set up during Spanish colonization still shape how women are represented in family and society. It also opens room for reclaiming cultural stories and women's power.
4. Social Constructivism says gender is not inherent (not natural or built-in) but is produced by social processes and culture. In the PH, men are expected to be breadwinners and women household managers. Filipino women still carry a heavier share of unpaid care work even when they work full time.
5. Queer Theory opposes fixed, "normal" definitions of gender and sexuality and welcomes diverse identities. The babaylan is a historical reference point: in pre-colonial times, the babaylan often crossed gender lines and served as a healer or spiritual leader. Modern LGBTQIA+ activists draw inspiration from this figure.

1.5 Everyday PH examples of gender norms

- Education: school dress codes (boys must keep hair short, girls wear skirts) keep masculine and feminine norms in place.
- Work: many women are in the workforce yet are still expected to do the "second shift", which means managing housework after their paid job. This shows continuing stereotypes about unpaid work.
- LGBTQIA+ rights: interest in the babaylan shows growing awareness of non-binary lives. Activists want legal protection against discrimination.
- Media and literature: women have long been portrayed in traditional ways, but stories of women in control of their own lives are becoming more common.

1.6 How gender studies became institutionalized in the PH ★

- UP Department of Women and Development Studies (DWDS): formal operations began in 2000, building on a program set up in 1987. It is regarded as the pioneer of women and gender studies programs in the Asia-Pacific region.
- Miriam College Women and Gender Institute (WAGI): focuses on gender-fair education, peace and security, and young women's leadership, and runs trainings to promote equality.
- UP Center for Women and Gender Studies: produces research and working papers, with an intersectional approach to health, employment, and political participation.
- Government and NGOs: work together to train public officials and community leaders in gender sensitivity and to include gender perspectives in national development plans.

1.7 Four contemporary PH issues ★

1. Gender-based violence. Cultural practices let men dominate and expect women to submit. The National Demographic and Health Survey found about 17.5% of women aged 15–49 had experienced physical, sexual, or emotional violence from an intimate partner. 41% of victims do not seek help because they fear harassment or shame. Other barriers are economic dependence on the abuser and lack of support services. The law that protects women is the Anti-Violence Against Women and Their Children Act, but enforcement is inconsistent and cultural attitudes get in the way. Local NGOs run awareness campaigns.

2. Rights of transgender persons. More than 50 trans or non-binary Filipinos were murdered between 2010 and 2020. Activists back the SOGIE Equality Bill to protect people from discrimination. The book points out the irony that trans people face discrimination and violence today even though pre-colonial society respected the babaylan. Lack of legal recognition makes them more vulnerable in employment and healthcare.
3. Cultural differences in masculinity and femininity under globalization. Many Filipino women migrate abroad as caregivers or domestic workers. Their remittances (money sent home) become a key source of household income, which can shift power and roles within families. Global media can inspire women's rights movements but can also reinforce harmful myths about femininity.
4. Online gender-based violence (OGBV). Technology has brought online harassment and trafficking. Victims often do not report because of social sanctions or because authorities do not believe them.

1.8 Exam helpers for Chapter 1

⚠ Easily confused

- Gender (social roles and identity) is not sex (biological).
- Feminist theory focuses on women's inequality. Intersectionality focuses on overlapping identities. Queer theory challenges fixed binaries.
- Social constructivism says gender is made by society. Postcolonial feminism says colonial history shaped gender relations.
- Butler = performativity. Rubin = sex/gender system. Connell = hegemonic masculinity. Foucault = power constructs identity.

What the summative test asks: why feminist theory matters (it gives frameworks to challenge systemic inequalities); why gender is a social construct (roles vary across cultures and change over time); why the binary is a problem (it excludes non-binary, transgender, and gender non-conforming people); how queer theory challenges roles (it encourages diverse expressions and questions the binary); why masculinity is studied (it reveals how structures shape male identity and power); what postcolonial feminism does (it critiques how colonial history shapes current gender norms); why GBV matters; what Butler's performativity means; why men's studies matters (men are also shaped by gender constructions and can be both helped and harmed by patriarchy). Essay: how intersectionality gives a deeper analysis than looking at gender discrimination alone, with PH examples.

★ Rapid review

- The field began in the late 1960s and 1970s in North America from the women's liberation movement.
- First women's studies program: San Diego State University, 1970.
- Rubin (1975), de Beauvoir (1949), Butler (performativity), Connell (hegemonic masculinity), Foucault (power).

- Five frameworks: feminist theory, intersectionality, postcolonial feminism, social constructivism, queer theory.
- UP DWDS (2000, roots 1987) is the Asia-Pacific pioneer. Miriam College has WAGI.
- Key numbers: 17.5% partner violence, 41% do not seek help, 50+ trans murders (2010–2020).
- Babaylan = pre-colonial healer or spiritual leader who crossed gender lines.

CHAPTER 2: Biological and Social Constructions of Gender

2.1 Core definitions ★

Term	Meaning
Sex	The anatomical and physiological characteristics that distinguish humans as female or male: chromosomes (XX female, XY male), reproductive organs, and hormones (estrogen , testosterone). It is usually assigned at birth based on anatomy.
Gender	The roles, behaviors, activities, expectations, and identities society assigns as proper for men, women, and other genders. It differs across cultures and history.
Gender identity	A person's deeply felt, internal experience of their own gender. It may or may not match the sex assigned at birth.
Gender expression	How a person shows gender to the world through clothing, behavior, haircut, voice, and presentation. It can be masculine, feminine, both, or neither.
Gender orientation	A seldom-used term for a person's self-awareness of their gender in relation to societal norms.
Sexuality	The capacity for sexual feelings and emotions. It covers sexual behaviors, preferences, and identities.
Sexual orientation	The pattern of emotional, romantic, or sexual attraction a person feels toward people of the same or different genders. It is not the same as sexual behavior and can change in some periods of a person's life.

2.2 Sex versus gender ★ ⚠

Aspect	Sex	Gender
What it is	A biological classification (male or female)	A social construct about roles and behaviors
How it is assigned	At birth, based on anatomy	Developed through socialization
Variability	Binary, but with intersex variations	A spectrum with many identities

Aspect	Sex	Gender
Link to identity	Typically lines up with biological sex	May differ from assigned sex (for example, transgender people)
How it shows	Through physical characteristics	Through behavior, such as masculine or feminine presentation

2.3 SOGIE ★

SOGIE stands for Sexual Orientation, Gender Intity, and Gender Expression. It is a single term that covers three parts of a person's identity: whom they are attracted to (orientation), who they feel they are (identity), and how they show it (expression).

Seven sexual orientations

1. Heterosexual: attracted to the opposite gender (for example, a man attracted to women).
2. Homosexual: attracted to the same gender. The word gay is used for gay men and for lesbian women.
3. Bisexual: attracted to genders besides one's own, meaning more than one gender.
4. Pansexual: attracted to all persons regardless of gender.
5. Asexual: lacks sexual attraction. Some asexual people still feel romantic attraction.
6. Demisexual: feels sexual attraction only after a strong emotional bond exists.
7. Queer: an umbrella term for all orientations and gender identities that are not heterosexual or cisgender.

Seven gender identities

1. Cisgender: identity matches the sex assigned at birth (born female, identifies as a woman).
2. Transgender: identity differs from the sex assigned at birth (assigned male, identifies as a woman).
3. Non-binary: does not identify as strictly male or female. May feel both, neither, or somewhere in between.
4. Agender: has no gender or does not identify with any gender.
5. Genderfluid: gender identity shifts over time or with circumstances.
6. Bigender: identifies as two genders, either at different times or at the same time.
7. Two-Spirit: used in some North American indigenous cultures for a person who embodies aspects of both male and female.

Four ways gender is expressed

1. Attire: wearing clothes associated with a man, a woman, or a mix of both.
2. Mannerisms and behavior: acting in ways society links to a particular gender.
3. Names and pronouns: choosing names and pronouns that fit one's gender (he, she, they).
4. Physical appearance: body hair, makeup, hairstyles, or body modification.

Gender expression is not fixed. It can change over time and depending on context. Society expects certain looks from each gender, but many people express themselves outside those standards.

2.4 The SOGIE Equality Bill ★

What it is. Its full name is the Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity Expression (SOGIE) Equality Bill. It is a proposed law (not yet passed) that would ban discrimination in the Philippines based on sexual orientation, gender identity, gender expression, or sex characteristics. It was pushed by members of Congress as a struggle for LGBTQIA+ rights in a mostly conservative society.

Timeline

1. January 26, 2000: first introduced in the House of Representatives. An early version was authored by the late Senator Miriam Defensor Santiago and former Akbayan Rep. Etta Rosales in the 11th Congress.
2. The book says it was introduced as the Employment Non-Discrimination Bill in the 14th Congress on November 16, 2000 (this is how the book states it). It was then refiled in the 17th, 18th, and 19th Congresses.
3. December 2022: the Senate Committee on Women, Children, Family Relations, and Gender Equality passed it, with 19 senators supporting.
4. May 2023: the House merged the different versions into one measure, which passed the Committee on Women and Gender Equality.
5. Now: attempts to bring it to a full (plenary) debate and vote have been slowed by political maneuvering and delays.

Key supporters: Senator Risa Hontiveros (sponsor in the Senate); Representatives Geraldine Roman (Bataan), Emmeline Aglipay-Villar, and Arlene "Kaka" Bag-ao.

Discriminatory acts the bill would outlaw

- Denying access to public services because of SOGIE.
- Discrimination in hiring and in terms and conditions of employment.
- Denying admission to, or expelling someone from, a school.
- Harsher student life conditions or stronger disciplinary measures.
- Denying access to public facilities and services.

Penalties: a fine of ₱100,000 to ₱500,000 and imprisonment of up to 12 years.

Opposition and obstacles. Conservative and religious groups say it threatens traditional family values and religious freedom. Disinformation about the bill also confuses lawmakers and the public.

Support and advocacy

- About 123,000 people joined Quezon City Pride in June 2023 demanding its passage.
- Amnesty International Philippines and LGBTQIA+ alliances lobby and run campaigns, including training to create safe spaces in schools and local governments.
- Local ordinances serve as models for national law. Quezon City adopted a gender-fair ordinance because of grassroots campaigns.
- Celebrities have publicly urged lawmakers to act.

Why it matters. Surveys show many LGBTQIA+ Filipinos have been harassed or rejected from jobs because of their SOGIE, even though public tolerance seems to be rising (for example, more people join Pride marches).

⚠️ Name versus acronym: the bill's name says "Gender Identity Expression" while SOGIE elsewhere is spelled "Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity, and Gender Expression." Know both as the book states them.

2.5 Intersex and transgender perspectives ★

Intersex people are born with sex characteristics (chromosomes, hormones, or internal or external genitalia) that do not fit the typical definitions of female or male. Transgender people have a gender identity that differs from the sex assigned at birth.

⚠️ Key difference: intersex is about sex characteristics (the body). Transgender is about gender identity (how a person identifies).

	Intersex	Transgender
Identity formation	May struggle early with questions of sex and gender; status is often confirmed through medical records or surgeries	Usually builds gender identity independent of biological factors
How society sees them	Through a medical pathology lens	Through gender identity politics
Visibility	Less known; marginalized even within LGBTQIA+ spaces	More visible

Challenges of intersex people in the PH

1. Medicalization: surgeries or hormone treatments to make bodies fit binary sex standards, which raises questions of bodily autonomy and consent.
2. Lack of awareness: ignorance causes stigma and discrimination, including from the LGBTQIA+ community.
3. Advocacy: advocates demand that medical interventions require informed consent and want better representation.

Challenges of transgender people in the PH

1. Discrimination in employment, healthcare, and education, including mistreatment and assault.
2. Healthcare: very little gender-affirming healthcare. They are denied hormone therapy or surgery because providers lack knowledge or practice discrimination.
3. Legal recognition: trans identities are not legally recognized, so changing names and gender on official documents is hard, which leads to further marginalization.
4. Cultural stigma: the Philippines is predominantly Catholic, and conservative views on gender roles make acceptance harder.

2.6 Exam helpers for Chapter 2

What the summative test asks: definition of gender identity; main difference between sex and gender; the term for the pattern of attraction (sexual orientation, not sexuality); what SOGIE stands for; an example of a discriminatory act under the bill (denying a public service); asexual = not sexually attracted to anyone; gender expression = outward presentation; intersex = traits that do not fit typical male or female categories; the bill's first goal = eliminate discrimination based on orientation, identity, or expression. Essay (10 pts): how lack of legal recognition affects transgender people's healthcare, employment, and inclusion, and whether legal reform alone is enough or deeper cultural change is also needed.

★ Rapid review

- Sex is biological and assigned at birth. Gender is a social construct learned through socialization.
 - Seven orientations, seven identities, four forms of expression.
 - Bill first filed January 26, 2000; Senate committee December 2022 (19 senators); House merged May 2023; still awaiting plenary.
 - Penalties: ₱100,000 to ₱500,000 and up to 12 years.
 - Hontiveros (Senate); Roman, Aglipay-Villar, Bag-ao (House).
 - QC Pride June 2023: about 123,000.
 - Intersex = sex characteristics. Transgender = gender identity.

CHAPTER 3: Gender Socialization

3.1 What gender socialization is ★

Socialization is the process by which people learn and absorb society's expectations. Gender socialization is the part that teaches men and women the norms, behaviors, and roles society links to their sex. These "gender rules" affect personal, professional, and social life.

- It shapes self-concept, social beliefs, political attitudes, how people view each other, and emotional connections (Eagly & Wood, 1999).
- People can resist, but socialization strongly pushes them toward traditional roles.
- Even people who challenge norms conform without noticing. Examples: women who reject traditional roles may still feel pulled to act as hostess or administrative support in groups (DeVault, 1991). Men who want an equal split of housework may still overlook tasks like noticing the fridge is empty or a child needs a bath (Hochschild & Machung).
- Socialization is strengthened by feedback: behavior that fits gender expectations is rewarded, and behavior that does not is punished.

3.2 Gender identity and body image

- Gender identity is a major outcome of socialization: a person's definition of themselves as male, female, or somewhere on the spectrum. It affects expectations of one's abilities and interests (Rosenberg, 1986) and is linked to behaviors such as substance abuse, aggression, depression, and even driving (Andersen, 2009).
- Body image concerns usually begin in adolescence. Preschool children show no meaningful gender differences (Hendy et al., 2001). By early adolescence, girls compare their bodies with peers more than boys do, which lowers self-esteem (Jones; Polce-Lynch et al., 2001). College women report more dissatisfaction with their appearance than men (Hoyt & Kogan, 2001). Media images of idealized female bodies and peer pressure feed this.

- Gimlin (2002): the body is a canvas that reflects dominant cultural norms. Women may use cosmetics and clothing to meet beauty standards, and men may stress fitness or styles that show masculinity.

3.3 The agents of gender socialization ★

The main agents (sources) are family (parents), peers, play, schools, religion, mass media, and popular culture.

Parents

- They are the primary agents. They often discourage children from playing with opposite-sex toys, especially boys with "girls' toys." Parents tolerate girls who break gender roles more than boys who do (Kane, 2006). Example: a boy who likes dolls faces more disapproval than a girl who plays with trucks.
- Fathers and mothers share discipline, but fathers do less basic caregiving (LaFlamme et al., 2002).
- Attitudes have changed faster than behavior: both parents say fathers should be equally involved, yet mothers still spend more time on childcare. This gap between ideal and reality stresses mothers (Milkie et al., 2002).
- Children whose parents encourage gender-typed behavior tend to adopt it (Leaper & Friedman, 2007).

Peers

- Peer influence can be stronger than family influence. Peers shape values and reinforce norms, including racial and age norms (Moore, 2001).
- Gender norms are applied more strictly to boys than to girls. Boys acting "feminine" are ridiculed (Sandnabba & Ahlberg, 1999), and homophobic attitudes among peers punish boys for "feminine" behavior (Pascoe, 2007).
- A boy called a "sissy" faces harsher criticism than a girl called a "tomboy." As girls grow older, tomboy traits can bring harsher labels such as "dyke."
- Children actively police each other's behavior with verbal and non-verbal cues (Thorne, 1993).

Children's play

- Boys are usually steered to outdoor play and girls to indoor play.
- Boys' toys stress mechanization, militaristic themes, aggression, and competition. Girls' toys stress nurturing and appearance (Blakemore & Centers, 2005).
- Children's books show male characters as dominant, aggressive, and competitive, and boys and men appear far more often than girls and women. Fathers who appear are often ineffective or absent (Anderson & Hamilton, 2005).
- What children absorb from play and books can shape their self-concept and later career choices (Leaper & Anderson, 1997).

Schools

- Teachers have different expectations for boys and girls. Boys get more teacher attention (positive or negative), which makes them feel more important, while girls may be encouraged to be quiet (Sadker & Sadker, 1994).

- Male teachers were found to discipline boys more than girls, which reinforces the idea that boys are naturally troublesome (Dee, 2007).
- "Masculine" subjects (math, science) may be taught in ways that favor boys, while girls are nudged toward language arts and social studies (Nosek et al., 2009).

Religion

- Many traditions stress gender differences and hierarchy. Major Christian denominations often reflect male authority (Driessnack, 2006).
- In Orthodox Judaism, a common men's prayer thanks God for not making them a woman or a slave (Michaelson, 2012).
- Women are underrepresented in religious leadership (Pew Research Center, 2016).
- Fundamentalist (strict, literal) interpretations can restrict women through dress codes and limits on public participation (Riddick, 2008).

Media

- Men are overrepresented on television and in film (Eschholz et al., 2002).
- Women appear more often in professional roles now (Signorielli & Bacue, 1999), but they are still often sexually objectified. Social media influencers promote unrealistic body standards (Tiggemann & Slater, 2013).
- Advertising often shows women in submissive, household roles and men in authority (Glick et al., 2004).
- Platforms like YouTube let feminist creators challenge stereotypes (Gill, 2016), but many influencers still follow conventional beauty norms to stay visible.

3.4 Exam helpers for Chapter 3

⚠ Easily confused

- Sissy (a boy acting "feminine," treated harshly) and tomboy (a girl acting "masculine," treated more mildly).
- Parents tolerate girls' deviation more than boys', and peers apply norms more rigidly to boys.
- Gender identity is internal self-definition. Body image is how one perceives one's own body.

What the summative test asks (written as strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, threats): a strength is that socialization sets clear expectations (Eagly & Wood). A weakness is discouraging boys from "feminine" behavior (Kane) or overfocusing on women's appearance (Hoyt & Kogan). An opportunity is more visibility of alternative gender expression in media (Gill), reducing rigid gender labels on toys (Blakemore & Centers), and fathers becoming more involved in caregiving (Milkie). A threat is bullying of non-conforming boys (Pascoe), boys dominating classroom attention (Sadker & Sadker), and patriarchal religious teachings (Driessnack). Essay: how family, peers, and media both reinforce and challenge gender norms, how people resist them, and the wider effects.

★ Rapid review

- Agents: family, peers, play, schools, religion, media, popular culture.
- Peers can be stronger than family, and rules are stricter for boys.

- Boys get more teacher attention. Boys' toys are militaristic and competitive. Girls' toys are nurturing and appearance-focused.
- Body-image gaps start in adolescence, not preschool.
- Match researcher to finding: Eagly & Wood (effects of socialization), Kane (parents), Pascoe (homophobia and masculinity), Thorne (children police each other), Sadker & Sadker (teacher attention), Gimlin (body as canvas).

CHAPTER 4: Gender and Institutions

4.1 Key terms ★

Term	Meaning
Institutions	Established frameworks that keep social order and regulate behavior (work, politics, religion, healthcare).
Gender norms	Informal guidelines and shared expectations about how each gender should behave.
Gender roles	The behaviors, tasks, and responsibilities society assigns by gender.
Occupational segregation	The tendency for men and women to work in different types of jobs.
Gender pay gap	The difference in average earnings between women and men.
Glass ceiling	An unseen barrier that keeps women and minorities from rising into leadership.
Work-life balance	Keeping a healthy balance between work and personal or family responsibilities.
Women's suffrage	Women's right to vote.
Gender quota	A policy requiring a minimum percentage of women or men in decision-making bodies such as parliaments.
Political representation	How well the makeup of political bodies reflects the gender diversity of the population.
Gender mainstreaming	Building a gender perspective into policies, programs, and decisions.
Religious fundamentalism	Strict adherence to traditional beliefs, often linked to rigid gender roles.
Reproductive health	Physical, mental, and social well-being in all matters of the reproductive system, including family planning, pregnancy, and childbirth.

Term	Meaning
Gender bias in medicine	Health providers deciding based on preconceived ideas about gender.
Universal Health Coverage	A system where everyone gets needed health services without financial hardship.

4.2 Work and employment

History. Men were seen as providers and women were limited to home tasks. The Industrial Revolution brought women into factories, but into lower-paying, less stable jobs. 20th-century feminist movements won changes such as the Equal Pay Act of 1963 (United States).

PH history. Under Spanish rule, women were confined to domestic roles. The American occupation brought formal education to women, opening more jobs. Major progress in workplace rights came with the feminist movements of the 1970s and 1980s. The Women in Development and Nation-Building Act (RA 7192, 1992) aimed to increase women's participation across sectors.

Statistics ★

	United States	Philippines
Women in workforce	about 47%	about 48% of labor force
Leadership	28% of senior management; 7% of Fortune 500 CEOs	about 20% of top management
Dominated fields	Healthcare and education	About 75% of teachers and healthcare professionals
Low-participation fields	Technology and engineering (below 30%)	Engineering and technology (below 30%)
Pay	Women earn about 82 cents per dollar men earn	Women earn about 78% of what men earn for similar work

Causes of the pay gap are occupational segregation and biased hiring and promotion. The Philippine Commission on Women (PCW) pushes policies for equal pay and opportunity.

Case studies. In tech, women are passed over for promotion and get less mentorship. In academia, women face stricter evaluation and are less likely to get tenure. In the PH BPO industry, women face harassment and are overlooked for promotion. In the PH public sector, women struggle to balance work and family, leading to higher turnover.

Policies. Weak parental leave hurts women because they do most childcare. Sweden's generous parental leave led to more women returning to work and advancing. Unions such as the Trade Union Congress of the Philippines (TUCP) push for anti-discrimination laws and gender-responsive workplaces.

4.3 Politics and governance ★

- Suffrage in the PH: the movement grew in the early 20th century, with Concepción Félix de Calderón as an advocate. In a 1937 plebiscite, a large majority of Filipino women voted in favor of suffrage.
- Women leaders: Corazon Aquino and Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo both became Presidents.
- Current numbers: only 20.16% of candidates in the 2019 elections were women; women hold 23.3% of cabinet posts (2024). Across 141 countries, women hold 35.5% of local legislative seats, and only 3 countries have reached 50%.
- Gender and policy-making: women leaders have championed GBV, reproductive health, and economic empowerment. The Magna Carta of Women (2009) is the comprehensive law against discrimination.
- Gender-focused laws and programs: the Safe Spaces Act (RA 11313, 2019) covers gender-based sexual harassment in public spaces, schools, and workplaces. The Barangay Gender and Development (GAD) program requires barangays to spend at least 5% of their annual budget on GAD activities.
- Barriers: stereotypes that call women weak or emotional, and the double burden (domestic duties plus political or professional work).
- Five strategies for equity:
 1. Adopt gender quotas.
 2. Train and build capacity of women candidates.
 3. Work with political parties (funding, internal quotas).
 4. Challenge social and cultural barriers through media and education.
 5. Ensure a supportive legal framework such as the Magna Carta of Women.

4.4 Religion

- Religions often assign distinct roles to men and women. In many Christian groups, men lead and women support (teaching, caregiving). In Islam, men are often seen as protectors and providers and women as focused on family, though interpretations vary.
- PH Catholicism emphasizes traditional family values and often places women in subordinate roles. The Catholic Women's League advocates greater female participation. Catholic teaching strongly influences views on reproductive health and women's rights.
- Religious beliefs reinforce the idea that men are breadwinners and women caretakers.
- Women leaders: Mother Teresa and Ellen G. White (Christianity), Amina Wadud (Islam, who challenged traditional interpretations of the Quran), and Bishop Sofronio Bancud of the Philippine Independent Church (PH), who championed women's rights.
- Challenges: discrimination and limited leadership access, with sacred texts often cited to justify limits. Some denominations allow only men to be priests.

4.5 Healthcare

- Women's access is limited by weaker decision-making power, money problems, and cultural priority given to men's health needs. PH women in rural and low-income areas have less access to quality reproductive care.

- Adolescent girls face stigma, a lack of comprehensive sexuality education, and restrictive policies. Women living with HIV face dual stigma (for gender and for HIV status).
- Women's pain is often underestimated (Hay et al.). Medical studies historically used mostly male subjects, causing gaps in knowledge of women's health (Leonard).
- Policies: the Responsible Parenthood and Reproductive Health Act (RA 10354) aims at universal access to reproductive care but faces conservative opposition and funding gaps. The Magna Carta of Women (RA 9710) gives the legal framework for gender equality, including in health.
- Four strategies:
 1. Include gender perspectives in health policy.
 2. Train providers to reduce bias.
 3. Involve communities, especially women and marginalized groups.
 4. Monitor progress using sex-disaggregated data and gender-sensitive indicators.
- Concern's (2024) gender-transformative approach aims to correct the effects of gender bias and also to address its causes.

4.6 Exam helpers for Chapter 4

⚠ Easily confused

- Gender norms (informal expectations) vs. gender roles (assigned tasks).
- Glass ceiling (barrier to leadership) vs. occupational segregation (different job types) vs. pay gap (earnings difference).
- Quota (required share of seats) vs. mainstreaming (gender perspective in all policies).
- RA 7192 (women in development, 1992), RA 9710 (Magna Carta of Women, 2009), RA 11313 (Safe Spaces Act, 2019), RA 10354 (reproductive health).

What the summative test asks: definitions of gender, occupational segregation, glass ceiling, pay gap, gender norms, work-life balance, and GBV; the event that drove women's entry into the PH workforce (feminist movements of the 1970s and 1980s); RA 7192's goal (enhance women's participation across sectors of the economy); the strategy to raise women's political representation (gender quotas). Essay: how socially constructed gender affects identity and institutions (politics, religion, work), how society balances individual autonomy with collective gender expectations, and what institutions must change.

★ Rapid review

- RA 7192 (1992), RA 9710 (2009), RA 11313 (2019), RA 10354.
 - 1937 suffrage plebiscite, Concepción Félix de Calderón, GAD budget at least 5%.
 - PH: 48% of labor force, about 20% top management, about 75% of teachers and health workers, women earn about 78% of men's pay.
 - Five political strategies, four healthcare strategies.
 - Organizations: PCW, TUCP, Catholic Women's League.

CHAPTER 5: Intersectionality

5.1 What intersectionality is ★

Intersectionality is a framework showing how different social identities (gender, race, class, sexuality, ability, and more) overlap and interact to shape a person's experience, producing unique forms of oppression, discrimination, and privilege. The book says social categories are interdependent and mutually constitutive, meaning they depend on and shape each other.

- Traditional analysis looked at one category at a time (a single-axis lens). Intersectionality shows that a single focus misses the full picture.
- Examples: a Black woman may face racism and sexism together, which differs from what a white woman or a Black man faces. A poor disabled person faces barriers that neither wealthier disabled people nor poor able-bodied people face. A Black transgender woman may be discriminated against differently than a white gay man.
- Privilege means unearned advantages based on social identity.
- Everyone has multiple identities, so everyone can be analyzed, but the framework focuses on marginalized groups' compounded inequality.

5.2 Origins and key scholars ★

Kimberlé Crenshaw, a legal scholar and civil rights advocate, coined the term in 1989 in her paper "Demarginalizing the Intersection of Race and Sex: A Black Feminist Critique of Antidiscrimination Doctrine, Feminist Theory and Antiracist Politics."

- She is a founder of critical race theory (CRT), which examines how law and legal institutions maintain racial inequality and argues that law is not neutral.
- Her example case: DeGraffenreid v. General Motors. Black women sued for discrimination, but the court treated race and gender as separate categories and could not recognize the combined discrimination Black women faced.

Scholar	Contribution
Patricia Hill Collins	Black Feminist Thought (1990); the matrix of domination , showing how race, class, and gender oppressions are organized in social structures.
bell hooks (Gloria Jean Watkins)	Ain't I a Woman? Black Women and Feminism (1981); criticized racism in feminism and sexism in the civil rights movement.
Angela Davis	Women, Race, & Class (1981); history of race, gender, and class in women's rights struggles; also wrote on prisons and the prison-industrial complex.
Chandra Talpade Mohanty	Under Western Eyes (1984); criticized Western feminism for portraying Third World women as all alike.
Leslie McCall	The Complexity of Intersectionality (2005); methods for studying intersectionality with data.

Scholar	Contribution
Anna Carastathis	Intersectionality: Origins, Contestations, Horizons (2016); history and debates about the concept.
Judy Taguiwalo (PH)	Former DSWD Secretary; gender, class, labor, and social welfare.
Jean Encinas-Franco (PH)	UP Diliman political scientist; how identities shape women's political participation.
Nicole Curato (PH)	Sociologist at the University of Canberra; public sociology and deliberative democracy.
Rina Garcia Chua (PH)	Ecofeminism and environmental justice; how environmental harm hits Indigenous women.
Mary Racelis (PH)	Ateneo Institute of Philippine Culture; urban poverty and inequality.

5.3 Groups often analyzed

Women of color; LGBTQ+ people; people of different classes; Indigenous peoples; people with disabilities (facing ableism); migrants and refugees; religious minorities (for example, Muslim women facing Islamophobia plus sexism); older people (facing ageism).

5.4 Inequality across categories

Inequality is multidimensional. Racism, sexism, classism, homophobia, and ableism are interconnected and reinforce each other. Different categories share common mechanisms:

1. Ties to power structures (who holds privilege).
2. Institutionalized discrimination in education, healthcare, law, and work.
3. Stereotypes that justify hierarchies.
4. Unequal distribution of resources and opportunities.
5. Resistance through social movements.
6. Systemic barriers (for example, the glass ceiling).

Single-issue policies can miss people. For example, gender equality policies may help upper-class women but not working-class or minority women.

5.5 Intersectionality in the Philippines ★

Gender and sexuality

- Bakla: traditionally men who adopt feminine expression. Poor or rural bakla face more stigma and are often pushed into low-paying jobs like beauty salons, which shows how gender non-conformity and poverty combine.
- Transgender women (poor or rural): hormone therapy and surgery are costly and found mostly in cities. They also face higher risk of violence in public spaces.

- Lesbian women: in a mostly Catholic country, rural lesbian women face pressure to marry men and raise children.
- Bisexual women: face erasure ("it's just a phase"), made worse by class dependence on family.
- Workplaces: transgender workers face misgendering and a lack of inclusive policies. Schools: many lack anti-bullying policies, and gender-specific uniforms harm non-binary and trans students.
- Activism: women leading LGBTQ+ groups face sexism plus homophobia, and poor activists face state violence.
- Media: trans women and bakla are often shown as comic relief.
- Law: the SOGIE Equality Bill is stalled by conservative lawmakers.

Race, ethnicity, and class

- Indigenous peoples (Lumad, Aeta, Igorot): marginalized by ethnicity, poverty, and limited education. Lumad women also face restricted reproductive health access and higher rates of sexual violence.
- Muslim Filipinas (Bangsamoro): may face Islamophobia and sexism, for example harassment over the hijab.
- Overseas Filipino Workers (OFWs): Filipina domestic workers in the Middle East or Hong Kong face racial and gender discrimination, plus class and migrant-status disadvantage.
- War on Drugs (Duterte administration): most extrajudicial killing victims were from urban poor communities, and women were left raising children alone.
- Colorism: discrimination by skin color. Darker-skinned women, especially poor ones, are judged by fair-skin beauty ideals.
- Aeta and Dumagat laborers face exploitation. "Bakwit" schools for displaced Lumad communities in Mindanao are underfunded and targeted by military operations, and girls often leave school early to do chores.

5.6 Case study: Jennifer Laude ★

- Who and when: Jennifer Laude, a Filipina transgender woman, was killed on October 11, 2014 in Olongapo City by Joseph Scott Pemberton, a U.S. Marine stationed in the PH under a military agreement.
- Intersections at work:
 1. Gender identity: transphobic violence.
 2. Race and nationality: a white American soldier held power over a Filipina.
 3. Neocolonial power: the Visiting Forces Agreement (VFA) gave U.S. personnel protections that Filipinos do not get. Pemberton received a relatively light sentence and was pardoned by President Rodrigo Duterte in 2020.
 4. Socioeconomic status: many poor trans women turn to sex work for survival, and the stigma made her more vulnerable and less likely to get justice.
- The case galvanized the LGBTQ+ movement and raised issues of transphobia, militarism, and neocolonialism. It cannot be understood by looking at gender, race, or nationality alone.

5.7 Social media and intersectionality ★

Social media can amplify both marginalization and activism. The chapter's main strategies:

- Digital literacy and critical thinking: judging sources, spotting bias, and understanding how algorithms create echo chambers.
- Recognizing and responding to online harassment, with reporting tools and safe-space practices.
- Amplifying marginalized voices and inclusive storytelling that avoids tokenism and uses captions and alt text for accessibility.
- Overcoming online hate: education, stronger platform moderation, positive communities, and government and platform accountability.
- Using technology for visibility: hashtags, livestreams, and independent creators who bypass traditional gatekeepers.
- Building support networks and communities with clear rules and moderators.
- Driving policy change: raise awareness, mobilize petitions and protests, tag policymakers, partner with influencers and media, and sustain pressure.
- Amplifying intersectional research through open access, podcasts, and media.
- Hashtag movements: #MeToo, #BlackLivesMatter, #SOGIEEqualityPH, #EndSARS (Nigeria).
- Ethical allyship means active participation, listening, crediting activists, donating, and challenging oppression online and offline. It avoids performative activism, which centers the ally instead of the community.
- Danger: social media can reinforce stereotypes and magnify harassment of marginalized groups.

5.8 Exam helpers for Chapter 5

⚠ Easily confused

- Crenshaw coined the term (law). Collins created the matrix of domination. Mohanty critiqued Western feminism.
- Intersectionality (overlapping identities) vs. privilege (unearned advantage).
- Allyship (real action) vs. performative activism (self-centered).

What the summative test asks (true/false): intersectionality is not only about gender and race (false); Crenshaw coined it (true); it affects people with multiple identities, not one group (false); class does influence discrimination (so "class does not matter" is false); racism and sexism are not felt equally by everyone (false); digital literacy helps (true); social media amplifies both positive and negative representations (true); it is useful for research and activism (true); online harassment hits intersecting identities harder (true). Multiple choice: main focus is how identities interact; Crenshaw introduced it; privilege is unearned advantage; #MeToo shows intersectional activism; allyship means actively dismantling intersecting oppression. Essay: how social media can fight intersectional inequality, its positive and negative effects, and strategies for inclusive spaces.

★ Rapid review

- Crenshaw 1989; CRT; DeGraffenreid v. General Motors.

CHAPTER 6: Gender-Based Violence and Discrimination

6.1 Key terms ★

Term	Meaning
Gender-based violence (GBV)	Any harmful act directed at people because of their gender that causes physical, sexual, or psychological harm. It includes threats, coercion, and deprivation of liberty.
Discrimination	Unfair or prejudicial treatment because of gender, leading to unequal opportunities in work, education, and services.
Domestic violence	A repeated pattern of abusive behavior in an intimate relationship, used by one partner to control the other.
Physical abuse	Intentional injury through force (hitting, slapping).
Emotional/psychological abuse	Non-physical behavior that harms self-worth (verbal abuse, manipulation, intimidation).
Economic abuse	Controlling a partner's access to money and resources so they cannot support themselves or be independent.
Sexual harassment	Unwanted sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, or sexual conduct that creates a hostile or intimidating environment.
Quid pro quo harassment	Harassment where accepting sexual advances is made a condition for a job, promotion, or education, or refusal brings negative consequences.
Hostile environment	Unwelcome sexual conduct makes a workplace or school intimidating or offensive.
Sexual assault	Any sexual act without consent (rape, attempted rape, unwanted touching) that violates a person's autonomy and bodily integrity.
Glass ceiling / Gender pay gap	Same as Chapter 4: an invisible barrier to advancement, and the earnings difference between women and men.
CEDAW	The UN treaty (Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women) that aims to end discrimination against women.
Barriers to reporting	Fear of retaliation, social stigma, and lack of awareness of legal rights.

6.2 Domestic violence

- Forms: physical, emotional/psychological, and economic abuse. In the PH, one in four women has experienced physical violence from a partner. The most common types are physical and emotional violence.
- Control tactics: abusers use isolation, financial manipulation, and threats to create fear and dependence.
- Causes: gender inequality, rigid gender roles (such as women expected to be submissive), normalized violence, and patriarchy. In the PH, the idea that wives are subordinate to husbands and machismo (exaggerated masculinity used to justify violence and dominance) play a role. Poverty raises risk by increasing stress and trapping victims. Alcohol is often linked to abuse but is not its direct cause.
- PH culture: the notion of "saving face" and protecting a harmonious family image discourages reporting. Beliefs favoring family unity discourage leaving.
- Effects on victims: injuries, chronic pain, and death; depression, anxiety, PTSD, and low self-esteem; headaches, stomach problems, and sleep problems.
- Effects on children: anxiety, depression, aggression, trouble forming healthy relationships, and a higher risk of repeating abuse in their own relationships.
- Support: shelters, hotlines, and counseling. In the PH, the Philippine National Police Women and Children Protection Center runs a 24-hour hotline, and the DSWD operates shelters. RA 9262 gives legal protection, but enforcement is a challenge.

6.3 Sexual harassment and assault ★

- Sexual harassment is unwanted sexual conduct by someone in a position of authority, influence, or moral superiority, most often in work or school. It takes two forms: quid pro quo and hostile environment.
- In the PH, one in five women has experienced sexual harassment. Many cases go unreported because of fear of retaliation, victim-blaming, and little awareness of legal protections.
- Sexual assault is a criminal offense involving non-consensual sexual contact and can happen anywhere. Survivors can suffer injuries, chronic pain, PTSD, depression, anxiety, and suicidal thoughts.

⚠ Harassment vs. assault

	Sexual harassment	Sexual assault
What it is	Unwanted sexual advances or conduct	Non-consensual sexual contact, from unwanted touching to rape
Legal treatment	Handled through civil rights laws and workplace rules (for example, HR complaints)	Prosecuted under criminal law
Setting	Mostly work or school	Any setting

- Roots: power imbalances, machismo, objectification of women, and victim-blaming (the belief survivors provoked or deserved it), reinforced by media.
- Prevention: comprehensive sexuality education in schools, workplace training, and campaigns that challenge rape myths and victim-blaming.

- Advocacy: the #MeToo movement fought the culture of silence. In the PH, GABRIELA and the Philippine Commission on Women defend women's rights and work against sexual violence.

6.4 Workplace discrimination ★

- Hiring: employers may favor men because of stereotypes. One in six Filipino women reported being asked about family planning in job interviews.
- Promotion: women are passed over despite equal qualifications (the glass ceiling).
- Pay: PH women earn about 18.4% less than men in the same roles, due to occupational segregation and bias.
- Harassment and hostile work environments create a toxic culture, lower satisfaction, and higher turnover.
- Laws:
 1. Labor Code of the Philippines: prohibits discrimination against women in employment and requires equal pay for equal work.
 2. Anti-Sexual Harassment Act of 1995 (RA 7877): covers sexual harassment in schools and workplaces, and requires employers to set up reporting policies.
 3. Magna Carta of Women (RA 9710, 2009): comprehensive law that protects women's rights, including in employment.
- Effects on workers: reduced motivation and productivity, higher turnover, anxiety, depression, burnout. Mental health stigma in the PH keeps people from seeking help.
- Best practices for employers: clear anti-discrimination policies, gender-sensitive hiring and promotion, flexible work arrangements for caregivers, and training on unconscious bias. PCW's GAD programs support gender-responsive policies.

6.5 Legal protections and challenges ★

Law or treaty	What it does
RA 9262 Anti-Violence Against Women and Their Children Act (2004)	Protects women and children from physical, emotional, and economic abuse.
RA 7877 Anti-Sexual Harassment Act (1995)	Covers sexual harassment in work and education.
RA 9710 Magna Carta of Women (2009)	Eliminates discrimination against women; requires women's desks in police stations.
RA 11313 Safe Spaces Act (2019)	Addresses gender-based harassment in public spaces and workplaces and requires prevention policies.
CEDAW (UN, 1979)	Obligates signatory states, including the PH, to end discrimination against women.

- Barriers to reporting: fear of retaliation, stigma and shame, and lack of awareness. Philippine norms that put family unity first make this worse.

- Limits of existing laws: inconsistent enforcement (police may lack training or resources), judicial delays (slow court cases discourage victims), and cultural bias (victim-blaming inside the legal system).
- Advocacy: grassroots groups like GABRIELA pushed reforms such as the Safe Spaces Act.
- Emerging issues: online harassment and cyberbullying, and the need to apply intersectionality in law.
- Four recommendations:
 1. Train law enforcement on gender sensitivity.
 2. Run public awareness campaigns.
 3. Expand support services (shelters, counseling, legal aid).
 4. Promote gender-sensitive policies in all sectors.

6.6 Exam helpers for Chapter 6

⚠ Easily confused

- RA 9262 (domestic violence, 2004), RA 7877 (harassment in work and school, 1995), RA 11313 (public spaces, 2019), RA 9710 (Magna Carta of Women, 2009).
- Quid pro quo (sex as a condition) vs. hostile environment (intimidating atmosphere).
- Harassment (civil or workplace) vs. assault (criminal).
- Physical, emotional, and economic abuse: injury vs. harm to self-worth vs. control of money.

What the summative test asks: gender norms and roles normalize violence by reinforcing male dominance; machismo justifies violence to assert dominance; emotional abuse mainly harms mental health while physical abuse causes visible injury; victims hesitate to report because of culture, fear of retaliation, and economic dependence; gender-sensitive hiring and promotion and anti-discrimination policies address workplace discrimination; the glass ceiling blocks advancement despite qualifications; CEDAW is a comprehensive global framework against gender-based discrimination; economic abuse means denying financial resources to keep control; GABRIELA raises awareness, advocates legal reform, and supports victims; a hostile environment lowers job satisfaction, raises turnover, and harms mental health. Essay (5 pts): how effective current laws and social movements are against GBV and workplace discrimination in the PH, the practical challenges, examples, and improvements.
